The Healthcare Organization's Role in Formulating Public Policy

The ACHE panel will focus on the healthcare organization's role in formulating public policy. As the healthcare movement continues from volume to value, healthcare leaders must be knowledgeable about changes to Medicare and Medicaid, and all other federal, state and local healthcare legislative issues.

Healthcare leaders must consider critical issues that confront their organizations, including access to care, patient safety and population disparities. In addition, healthcare leaders must also be in tune with payer demands for cost containment and the growing expectation for transparency, as well as innovative models to deliver healthcare more efficiently and effectively.
